- Conference program includes educational sessions, exhibits of preservation products and services, tours and receptions.
- Advanced training, professional workshops are held in conjunction with the conference: Historic Building Development (with tax credits), Section 106 Review/Compliance.
- Networking opportunities abound at the luncheons, exhibits, receptions and tours as part of this conference.
- Conference brochure is mailed to approximately 4000 different people around the state.
- Conference regularly draws 200+ people from a variety of disciplines (architects, preservation craftsman and contractors, historians, historic property owners, bankers, developers, accountants, attorneys, historic design review commission members, city planners and building inspectors, government officials, other local preservation advocates)— from communities across the state.
- Many of these individuals are representing their business, organization, or community, taking the information they get at the conference back to disseminate with their group. Conference attendees will be given a jump drive that includes directories of all sponsors.
